1. Building a Commercial Booth at The Royal

The Royal takes place in the Enercare Centre, at Exhibition Place, Toronto. This is a city owned venue and property. There are many union and collective agreements in place, as such, there are stricter measures on what and how you can build your booth at our event. These measures must be adhered to by Royal Management and all exhibitors, educators, sponsors, and partners.

All booths, all halls must be prefabricated to assemble on-site. No material cutting or painting is permitted on site. Think of it like IKEA furniture. While on site, your assembly should require nothing more than a screwdriver &/or Allen key!

Not Possible? If not, you must book labor services with a recognized City of Toronto union group or member. There are union representatives available to book for carpentry, construction and painting etc.

Yes, there is a cost associated with these services, however the cost of a union grievance (we can assure you!) is much higher and is payable by the License Agreement Exhibitor for the booth space. Stronco Show Services can help with most booth labour related builds and have accredited union labour in good standing available to book in advance of set-up. Please review their catalogue (separate) for contact and booking information.

If you wish to display, offer for sale, or use, any electrical equipment which is not CSA certified, the item can be submitted to the CSA's Electrical Inspections Department for approval by means of their electrical inspection services.
